E. SESSION SUMMARY:

Activity involves several small fish; boats going to a large freighter. The freighter is low, narrow & with an appearance of that of a post petro ship rather than a cargo ship. There is a transfer of metal cylinders or tanks which is important. These tanks/cylinders are either transferred, or stored, within a 3 sided object or structure (see page 7.) These tanks/cylinders contain a lumpy/chunky material that is used to hold other objects. These objects have a heavy, "finished" ~~shape~~ concept associated with them. Their shape is sharp, definite angles or edges.

One vessel has wooden paneling interior. The interior is a lot nicer than the outside appearance indicates. ~~Ext~~ Exterior has purposely been left "undept". This vessel has flat objects stacked up which are organic in nature. There are large glass bottles lying on their sides as well.

The interior of a 2d vessel has white painted walls & ceilings which are ~~and~~ chipped and pitted. The location of coffee pot parts or pieces is important. <sup>In this location</sup> A row of clear bags or wrapping containing small objects are found ~~of small pebbles or stones~~, which are ~~small~~ dark, hard & roundish; some feel like they are coated with powder or dust. The bags/pipes are stacked vertically and are about hand-sized. (See page 3 of notes).

Approved For Release 2000/08/10 : CIA-RDP96-00791R000100280001-7

Pages 3 & 4 depict another object & its location which are significant to this activity. A blue or green painted tube 36"-40" long and 6"-8" in diameter is fitted into a wooden container with a door that can be secured. The "tube" contains paper & cardboard (papers with numbers; some maps; also something within a rectangular cardboard box, which slips into the center of the tube).

The wooden container is attached to the wall & ceiling in one corner of a specific cabin. The container is painted the same color as the cabin walls. It is less obvious than one would think. Page 4 depicts location and surrounding attributes of the cabin. There are also two blue metal tanks or cylinders which sit vertically and are short & "fat". A brown "doctor's" bag sits in one corner.

A vessel is in dry dock with men walking under & around the ship. A hold on this ship is used for fish "storage". There is a spinning object reminiscent of a wheel or reel is present. A metal trough-shaped object used for wrapping something is significant to this activity.

There is movement straight down along a flat surface. Machine parts & maintenance procedures are significant. The latter feels as if it is used to distract from the actual going-on. It is during these "maintenance procedures" that the previously mentioned transfer of tanks/cylinders occur. The concept of two large "eggs" feel significant to this activity.

There is a strong Asian & specifically oriental feel to the ships & crew. Philippino's and an Arctic coast cultural type are present.

* Significant objects are being taken out of this country.

3)

There are objects which are tightly wrapped. Their appearance is reminiscent of some sort of animal tightly bound into a fetal position; then wrapped w/ a heavy, light colored ~~crinkly~~ crinkly material.

There are also tables with wheels present on the "receiving" vessel (?).

men aboard these vessels are targeting animals for profit to be sold on land. A questionable activity occurring in the area
is hunting and killing medium sized mammals, which are active while in water, possibly for their skins. They are valuable, live,
warm blooded creatures.

Black poles or posts and wooden barrels are somewhat relevant to the vessels. Some items are towed in from the water. Fabric or clothing is instrumental at this site.

Items gathered at this location
are, at some points, transported by plane and sold on land for people.
